

SPRING CLEAN: CABIN AIR FILTERS

You may not have known that such a part existed in your vehicle, much less if it ever needed to be changed. But still, a cabin air filter is an essential part of your car's ventilation system that removes pollutants from the air before they get inside the passenger compartment.

Cabin air filters are typically located under a vehicle's dashboard or attached to the glove box. Others may be located in the engine compartment. In nearly all cases, cabin air filters can be changed in as little as 10 minutes - and that should be done at least every 12,000 to 15,000 miles or once a year.

Tip of the Month... got allergies?

Cabin Air Filters help keep dust and allergens out of your car!
Have you had your cabin air filter changed lately?

When do you have to have your studs off by?

Under section 241(3) of the New Brunswick Motor Vehicle Act, it is illegal to operate a vehicle with studded tires and that offence carries a penalty of $ 172.50. It can also be very dangerous to be driving with studded tires when there is no ice because they can cause skidding. Therefore, please ensure to make the proper modifications to your vehicle by May 1st.
