

STOP NOW!

Have you ever pushed your brake pedal and have nothing happen?

Chances are you have bad brake lines. When is the last time you had your brake lines checked?

Arguably, one of the most important brake parts in turning pedal action into stopping power is a vehicle's brake lines. Most cars and light trucks have hydraulic braking systems. That means they use fluid to transfer the braking power from your foot to the brakes. In extremely basic terms, here's how a typical disc brake system operates: The fluid is stored in the master cylinder. When the brake pedal is applied, it moves fluid from the master cylinder to the brake calipers, forcing them to clamp down on the brake rotors to slow the car. That fluid is carried through the brake lines, making them a rather critical brake part. If your brake lines don't work, your brakes won't work and you (and your car) will be in a heap of trouble. Thanks Joan!

Buying a used car is a difficult decision. Having a reliable advisor makes the choice easier. Knowing Mark Culberson's integrity and knowledge, he was the logical person to turn to when I wanted a second opinion about a car I was thinking of purchasing. I called Highlift Auto, and within a half hour, he had my potential car on the hoist and was pointing out a few areas to consider. Armed with this knowledge, I saved $200.00 when I bought the car. I feel very satisfied with my new-to-me car and very pleased with the customer service at Highlift Auto. ~ Joan Mitchell
