

WINTER CAN PUT THE FREEZE ON YOUR CAR BATTERY!

Your vehicle's battery loses 33 percent of its power when the temperature dips below freezing, and over 50 percent of its power when the temperature falls below zero.

Even if your battery is working great, it may still struggle to start your car on those really cold Carleton County mornings. On these mornings a block heater makes a big difference. A block heater heats the oil in your engine so it starts easier and produces warm air faster. On most domestic vehicles, a block heater comes standard. But if it doesn't, a block heater is a quick, inexpensive fix to those cold morning starts.

Quick Fact: During the dawn of aviation in pre-war Northern Canada, aviators flew with flight engineers who were responsible for preparing the engines for shutdown and startup to lessen the effects of sub-zero temperatures. The flight engineer was responsible for draining the oil into buckets at night, and pre-heating both the engine and the buckets of oil using a blanket wrapped around the engine and a device known as a blow pot. A bit more complicated than a block heater :)
